The extravaganza has become an excuse for political reporters to show up in Ames every August before a presidential year and whip up some excitement over something they know is a travesty. Some even do it while proclaiming the straw poll a travesty, because it still livens up the dog days of summer.
"But if you point out the benefits - if the house notices someone gets up and goes to the bathroom and doesn't return for an hour to bed it's probably a [bad] situation which might have happened - if you outline that most people are very positive,"

But sometimes providence is not enough. Sometimes these groups need a kick in the pants by a would-be "televangelist," in this case, from the president's pulpit. Having just arrived in office, President Barack Obama met with both bootleggers and baptists to ensure they would support his health care reform agenda. They did so in a public letter of approval signed by the American Cancer Society, American Medical Association, Families USA, Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, Regence BlueCross BlueShield and the Service Employees International Union. Bootleggers and Baptists aplenty.

Two key pieces of data today. Germany’s ZEW sentiment index will give an early reading for activity in May after first quarter growth slowed in Europe’s largest economy. UK inflation is forecast to hold at zero in April, with expectations of a first increase in interest rates now pushing back into 2016, particularly if the Conservative government means what it says about the epic scale of public spending cuts it has in the pipeline.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration will hold a hearing on July 2nd. The hearing will investigate the automaker's performance on 20 recalls involving about 10 million cars, trucks and S-U-V's.

The company was further found to be routing their traffic through servers of companies that were registered in Latvia and Cyprus. The company is said to have taken money in exchange of a degree to people from US, Britain and United Arab Emirates. Many had fallen trap believing that the universities were real.

A series of earthquakes and shifting ground in the Southwest Rift Zone of the Kilauea Volcano might cause an eruption. Rash of earthquakes socked the volcano with as many as 20 to 25 quakes per hour. The tilt meters detected that the ground was deforming.

Tannehill has started in all 48 games for the Dolphins since he was drafted eighth overall in the 2012 draft. In 2014, he set career highs in virtually every single offensive category including completions, attempts, completion percentage, passing yards, passing touchdowns and passer rating.

Yet wine drinkers may not see much price difference. Importers are billed in euros. It's up to them to set dollar prices. And if there's any currency windfall, wineries like Hepp's may pocket it to make up for thinner profits or losses when the euro was strong.

"The Coalition increased its support in Ramadi today, in order to fulfill all requests of the Iraqi security forces," said the spokesman. The strikes targeted Islamic State fighting
