"I'm pleased to say The True History of the Elephant Man became the standard account for the general reader, though I should make clear the play got there before us. Then, of course, came the film with John Hurt. It's a great movie although David Lynch took the odd liberty with the facts."

There are many genuine characters and great shooting opportunities reveal themselves amongst the eclectic mix of tat, second-hand, antique and genuinely interesting product stalls. It is the people that make street shots, and the people in these markets are REAL people.

Some rare collectible hickory clubs cost more than $5,000. But most restored hickories sell for $60 to $150. A set with five to seven clubs suitable for play can be had for $500 to $600 -- not much more than a new graphite-composite driver.

When Jacqueline Kennedy entered the White House in January 1961, she assumed a role as culturally and politically enduring as any her husband played: She became and remained, the 20th century’s First Lady of Fashion.

The officers' attorneys have questioned her impartiality and asked a judge to replace her or dismiss the case. In court filings, they have said she moved too quickly to charge the officers because of the unrest in West Baltimore, where her husband is a city councilman. Other conflicts of interest include Mosby’s political relationship with an attorney representing the Gray family, the attorneys said.
"China wants to get involved in Brazil's large plans to build freight railroads, electricity and telecommunications networks," wrote the Chinese premier, who arrived on Monday night before beginning his official round of meetings on Tuesday.

African Parks, a Johannesburg-based group that employed Bill Fitzpatrick, cannot remove the remains on its own and is waiting for Cameroonian officials to assist, group spokeswoman Cynthia Walley said Monday. The plan is to hand over the remains to U.S. diplomats, according to Walley.

Overall, investors reduced their global equity allocation to a net 47 percent overweight, the lowest in six months. Global bond allocations were cut to a net 60 percent underweight, the lowest in nine months, as the global bond rout of April and May took hold.

Tice went missing in Damascus in 2012 and the U.S. State Department said in March Washington had been in periodic, direct contact with the Syrian government regarding his case, a statement his mother said provided a glimmer of hope.
