French teachers — and sometimes students — have gone on strike to protest every major change in the education system. The last set of changes, which added a half-day to what had previously been a four-day school week in primary schools, prompted protests for a school year.

Since there were three mouths working the telecast, “no one,” would include Breen, Mark Jackson and Van Gundy. And since we choose to interpret things any damn way we please, we will classify this as just another shot at Van Gundy.